TILES MUSEUM

JOURNEY TO THE WORLD OF TILES IN THE CITY OF TILES

The building, which was built by the last Germiyan ruler Yakup II (1387-1429) as the imaret of the social complex, was restored and opened for visits as the "Tile Museum" in 1999. Yakup II's tiled sarcophagus is located in the tomb of the building, which is called as "Gökşadırvan" by the locals because of its solid marble fountain. The tiled cenotaph of Yakup Bey is in here. The foundation inscription of the madrasa, an important historical source, which was located next to the imaret but collapsed in 1930s, is now placed in the south niche of the entrance door. It consists of thirty nine lines and written in Ottoman Turkish. The tiles produced from the 14th century to the present are exhibited in the museum.

The museum of tiles, also known as "flowers blooming in fire" is waiting for you in Kütahya which is in the creative cities network of UNESCO with its tile art in the field of craft and folk arts.
